

BELGRAVIA

Residents' Journal

JUNE 2015 • ISSUE 37

The Notebook

Who and what have been moving and shaking in Belgravia recently? We bring you up-to-date

Equestrian assets

Hubert de Watrigant is admired worldwide for his paintings of the racecourse. Though figurative, he experiments with techniques and looks for the moment when everyone else puts their binoculars down. It's a habit that has won him many admirers and collectors, including the Queen, the King of Morocco, Sheikh al-Thani, Baron Guy de Rothschild and the Wildenstein family. Go and see if you rate him at a summer exhibition of his paintings (15 June-10 July) at The Osborne Studio Gallery.

*The Osborne Studio
Gallery, 2 Motcomb
Street, SW1X 8JU,
020 7235 9667
(osg.uk.com)*

Giving from the heart

Vigilance Properties, Belgravia's local security company, is proud to work with the Ghurkas. 2015 is a landmark year, celebrating the bicentennial of the treaty with Nepal that founded the British Army's legendary brigade. Sadly the country was devastated by a terrible 7.8 magnitude earthquake in April and suffered another in May, so Vigilance is looking to raise £50,000 (it has collected more than £10,000 so far) to construct a new earthquake-resistant school and service educational, medical and community needs in the country. Visit the website below to see how you can help.

*justgiving.com/
vigilanceproperties*

An evening on the tiles

You know a street party is incredible when it attracts such a devoted following that it'll insist on celebrating it, full-tilt, even in the rain. That happened to the Elizabeth Street party a couple of years ago, but no doubt the sun will have his hat on this year as the event coincides with the 10 year anniversary of The Thomas Cubitt pub. To celebrate, Cubitt House will be hosting the fun, which is all in the name of a good cause, this year raising money for Farms for City Children – a charity that gives city kids the opportunity to work on a farm in the countryside for a week.

10 June, 6pm onwards